

DOG DAYS

If the phrase “diamond dogs” means nothing to you other than a classic David Bowie album, your mind is about to bend further than his did when penning its post-apocalyptic lyrics, because dog-inspired jewelry is now a thing.

The Italians have gone particularly barking for this craze, with dedicated brands like Dog’s Luxury by Mastrodoro. The Chinese, too, are primed for puppy love as we find ourselves in the Year of the Dog.

Yet the focus of this trend is not a general obsession with pooches, but a way to show affection for four-legged family members, be they Chihuahuas or King Charles spaniels. Brands like Pinomanna even encourage clients to send pictures of their pets, which are then dutifully transformed into bespoke gold and diamond lookalikes. It might not be the most wearable trend of the year, but every dog has its day. By Rachael Taylor

Mastrodoro. 18-karat gold Cavalier King ring set with black diamonds and orange sapphires. mastrodoro.com

Artemer. 18-karat yellow gold Dog and Snake signet ring set with diamonds. artemerstudio.com

Boucheron. 18-karat white gold Laïka le Husky watch with diamonds, sapphires, spinels, rock crystal and jade. boucheron.com

Suzanne Syz. Cuff with images of the jeweler’s dogs, past and present, carved and painted in rock crystal laid over mother of pearl. Set in rose gold with brown diamonds. suzannesyz.ch

Pinomanna. 18-karat white gold pendant with black and white diamonds. pinomanna.com

IMAGE: Shutterstock